JURISDICTIONAL STATEMENT

Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 158, this Court may exercise jurisdiction over appeals of preliminary injunctions issued by the bankruptcy court pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 105(a). In re Excel Innovations, Inc., 502 F.3d 1086, 1092 (9th Cir. 2007); In re First Alliance Mortgage Co. (“FAMCO I”), 264 B.R. 634, 644 and nn.9, 10 (C.D. Cal. 2001).

The November 7, 2007, preliminary injunction (“November 7 preliminary injunction”) issued by the bankruptcy court enjoined the Federal Trade Commission (“Commission”) from prosecuting a civil law enforcement action against The Billing Resource d/b/a Integretel (“Integretel”) styled, FTC v. Nationwide Connections, Inc., No. 06-CV-80180-Ryskamp/Vitunac (S.D. Fla.) (the “Enforcement Action” in the “Florida District Court”). (RV III, APDE 49.) By its terms, the November 7 preliminary injunction was to expire on March 14, 2008. But, on March 18, 2008, the bankruptcy court extended this preliminary injunction through June 12, 2008 (the “March 18 extension order”). (RV X, APDE 154.)¹ The November 7 preliminary injunction and the March 18 extension order both contemplate further proceedings. Accordingly, they are interlocutory, and may be appealed upon leave of this Court. The Commission’s notice of appeal may be treated as a request for leave. See FAMCO I, 264 B.R. 644 at n.10. Because the bankruptcy court’s injunction enjoins the Commission from enforcing a federal law, and from pursuing that action in the public interest, this Court should grant the Commission leave to pursue this appeal. See id. at 644.

Although the November 27, 2007, order, which enjoins the Commission and David R. Chase, P.A., a receiver appointed by the Florida District Court (the “Receiver”), from pursuing a contempt proceeding against Integretel ancillary to the Enforcement Action, is styled as a “preliminary injunction,” it contemplates no further proceedings and is, therefore, reviewable pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 158(a). Excel, 502 F.3d at 1092-93.

ISSUES PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

1. Whether the bankruptcy court abused its discretion when it entered (and subsequently extended) a preliminary injunction order enjoining the Commission from prosecuting its Enforcement Action against Integretel.

2. Whether the bankruptcy court abused its discretion in entering its November 27, 2007, preliminary injunction order enjoining the Commission from pursuing a Contempt Proceeding against Integretel that is ancillary to the Enforcement Action.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

An injunction entered by a bankruptcy court pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 105(a)² must be overturned if the bankruptcy court abused its discretion in entering it. An abuse of discretion occurs when a court does not apply the correct preliminary injunction standard, “misapprehend[s] the law with respect to the underlying issues in the litigation,” or “rests its conclusions on clearly erroneous findings of fact.” Chalk v. United States Dist. Ct., 840 F.2d 701, 704 (9th Cir. 1988); FAMCO I, 264 B.R. at 644-45. “A finding of fact is clearly erroneous when, although there is evidence to support it, the reviewing court on the entire evidence is left with the definite and firm conviction that a 1 mistake has been committed.” United States v. United States Gypsum Co., 333 U.S. 364, 395 (1948).

2 STATEMENT OF THE CASE

3 A. Introduction

4 On September 16, 2007, Integretel filed a voluntary petition under Chapter 11 of the 5 Bankruptcy Code, In re The Billing Resource d/b/a Integretel, No. 07-52890 (Bankr. N.D. Cal.)
6 (RV IV, BDE 1.) Three days later, Integretel commenced the adversary proceeding that led to this 7 appeal. The Billing Resource d/b/a Integretel v. David Chase and the Federal Trade Commission,
8 No. 07-AP-5156. (BDE 27; RV I, APDE 1.) It brought this adversary proceeding in an attempt to 9 enjoin the Commission from prosecuting its Enforcement Action -- an action that seeks, inter alia,
10 to obtain restitution for consumers who were billed by Integretel for bogus telephone charges.
11 During the course of the Enforcement Action, the Florida District Court initiated the Contempt
12 Proceeding, requiring Integretel to show cause why it should not be held in contempt for refusing 13 to comply with two orders requiring it to turn over $1.7 million to the court’s receivership estate.
14

15 On November 2, 2007, the bankruptcy court orally issued a preliminary injunction enjoining
16 the Commission from prosecuting the Enforcement Action through March 14, 2008. The court 17 issued its written order on November 7, 2007, and the Commission’s appeal was docketed on 18 November 14. (RV VIII, APDE 69; DCDI 1.)
19

20 On November 27, 2007, the bankruptcy court orally issued a second preliminary injunction, 21 this time enjoining the Commission and the Receiver from pursuing the Contempt Proceeding (the 22 “November 27 preliminary injunction”). (RV X, APDE 85, and DCDI 24 at 36:6-42:7.) It issued
23 its written order on November 27 (RV VIII, APDE 78), and the Commission’s appeal was docketed
24 with this Court on November 29. (DCDI 11.)
25
26
27
28

1 The Commission moved for stays pending appeal regarding both the November 7 and the 2 November 27 preliminary injunctions (DCDI 3 and 13), but on March 7, 2008, the Court denied both
3 motions. (DCDI 71.)³

5 On March 18, 2008, the bankruptcy court entered an order granting a motion filed by 6 Integretel, thereby continuing until June 12, 2008, the preliminary injunction that precludes the 7 Commission from prosecuting its Enforcement Action against Integretel (“the March 18 extension
8 order”). (RV X, ADPE 154; APDE 155 at 23:23-46:5.) The bankruptcy court scheduled a hearing
9 for June 5, 2008, to determine whether to extend the November 7 preliminary injunction beyond the 10 current June 12, 2008 termination date. (RV X, ADPE 154; APDE 155 at 45:14-24.)
11

12 The Commission appealed the March 18 extension order to this Court, where it was docketed 13 at No. 08-1637-JF. The Commission, the Receiver, and Integretel jointly filed an administrative 14 motion to consolidate the appeal of the March 18 extension order with the appeals of the November 15 7 and 27 preliminary injunctions. (DCDI 76.) Though this Court has not yet ruled on this motion, 16 this brief addresses all three orders on appeal.
17

18 B. Statement of Facts

19 1. The Enforcement Action

20 The Commission filed its complaint in the Enforcement Action on February 27, 2006, 21 pursuant to §§ 5(a) and 13(b) of the FTC Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 45(a) and 53(b). (RV II, APDE 25, 22 Bates 00176-185.)⁴ In the original version of the complaint, the Commission did not name Integretel 23
24

26 ³This Court also denied (DCDI 71) the Commission’s motion to change the venue for these appeals to the Florida District Court pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1412. (DCDI 3.)

27 ⁴Section 5(a) of the FTC Act, 15 U.S.C. § 45(a), prohibits “unfair or deceptive acts or 28 practices in or affecting commerce.”

1 as a defendant. Instead, the complaint alleged that, inter alia, two former clients of Integretel,
2 Access One and Network One (and other defendants), engaged in a massive telephone billing scam
3 in which phony collect call charges were “crammed” onto consumers’ telephone bills. As a result
4 of this scheme, consumers were defrauded out of approximately $35 million. (RV II, APDE 25, 5 Bates 00180-181.)

7 The same day the Commission filed its complaint, the Florida District Court entered an ex
8 parte temporary restraining order (“TRO”) (RV II, APDE 25, Bates 00125-155), appointing David 9 Chase as the receiver over, inter alia, Access One and Network One. The receivership included “all 10 assets of the Defendants as of the time this Order was entered” including funds “owned or controlled
11 by any Defendant, in whole or in part, for the benefit of any Defendant.” (RV II, APDE 25, Bates
12 134-35, TRO ¶ II.) Upon service of the TRO, any entity holding assets of an Enforcement Action 13 defendant was required immediately to turn over those assets to the Receiver. (RV II, APDE 25, 14 Bates 144-45, TRO ¶ X.) The TRO also required “third party billing agents” to “cooperate with all
15 reasonable requests of the FTC and the Receiver relating to the implementation of this Order,
16 including the transfer of funds at the Receiver’s direction.” (RV II, APDE 25, Bates 146, TRO
17 ¶ XI.)

20 Integretel served as a third party billing agent, or “billing aggregator,” for Access One and 21 Network One. Unlike Integretel, Access One and Network One did not have contracts with local 22 phone companies, so they could not submit their bogus charges to phone companies for collection
23 from consumers. Thus, Access One and Network One relied upon Integretel to submit the bogus
24 charges to phone companies. The phone companies then collected the charges from consumers, and 25 transmitted amounts collected to Integretel. From these amounts, Integretel kept a certain portion 26
27
28

1 as its fee, retained certain amounts as reserves against various contingencies, and paid the remainder
2 to Access One and Network One.

4 On March 6, 2006, in response to the TRO, Kenneth Dawson, the president of Integretel, 5 submitted to the Commission an unsworn statement claiming that it held “no amounts [that] are 6 currently due and owing” to defendants Access One and Network One. (RV II, APDE 25, Bates
7 00157-158.)

9 As a result of Integretel’s role in this scheme, on September 21, 2006, the Commission filed
10 an amended complaint in the Enforcement Action adding Integretel as a defendant. (RV II, APDE 11 25, Bates 00163-175.)⁵ On September 25, 2006, the Florida District Court entered an amended 12 preliminary injunction that continued the receivership and turnover provisions originally set out in 13 its February 2006 TRO. (RV III, APDE 35, Bates 0004-0028.) The amended preliminary injunction
14 was, like the TRO, served on Integretel.

15
16 Shortly after the amended preliminary injunction was entered, the Receiver in the 17 Enforcement Action learned that, contrary to Mr. Dawson’s March 6, 2006, statement, Integretel
18 was holding funds (the “Reserve Funds”) that, pursuant to Integretel’s contracts with Access One
19 and Network One, were property of those two defendants.⁶ Pursuant to the TRO and the amended
20 preliminary injunction, the Reserve Funds had become the property of the Enforcement Action

23 ⁵Integretel has a history of involvement in similar fraudulent conduct. In October 2000,
24 the Commission sued Integretel for its role in a scheme that charged consumers for Internet
25 pornography that they never purchased or authorized. Integretel agreed to a Stipulated Final 26 Order by which it released all claims to the $1.6 million in consumer payments that it then held and transferred these monies to the Commission for consumer redress. See FTC v. Verity Int’l, Ltd., 443 F.3d 48 (2d Cir. 2006).

27 ⁶As provided by Integretel’s contracts with Access One and Network One, the Reserve 28 Funds were funds belonging to Access One and Network One that Integretel was entitled to retain to protect itself against various contingencies. None of those contingencies has occurred.

1 receivership estate, and should have been turned over to the Receiver. On October 16, 2006, after 2 Integretel refused to turn over the Reserve Funds, the Receiver filed a motion in the Enforcement
3 Action for an order to show cause why Integretel should not be held in contempt, due to its 4 noncompliance with the turnover provisions of the Florida District Court's injunctive orders (the 5 "Contempt Proceeding").

7 On September 14, 2007, the Florida District Court entered an Omnibus Order. (RV III, 8 APDE 35 at Bates 0029-39 (the "September 14 Omnibus Order").) Among other things, the 9 September 14 Omnibus Order, which was entered prior to the filing of Integretel's bankruptcy
10 petition, granted the Receiver's motion for an order to show cause why Integretel should not be held 11 in contempt for failing to turn over the Reserve Funds. The district court observed that:
12

13 Integretel did not advise either the Receiver or FTC that it was holding reserves. Rather its 14 president informed the FTC on March 6, 2006 that "no amounts are currently due and 15 owing" to Access One and Network One. As of August 26, 2006, Integretel was holding 16 $1,186,430.36 in reserves for Access One and $173,918.66 in reserves for Network One.
17 These amounts have increased, and as of June 30, 2007, the reserve amount being held by 18 Integretel * * * is $1,762,762.56.

19 (RV III, APDE 35 at Bates 0030.) The Florida District Court further held that the Reserve Funds
20 are property of the receivership estate in the Enforcement Action because they are held by Integretel
21 on behalf of, or for the benefit of, defendants Access One and Network One and thus were 22 "capture[d]" by the turnover provisions of the Florida District Court's injunctive orders in the 23 Enforcement Action. (Id. at 33.) The court ordered Integretel to turn over the Reserve Funds to the 24 Receiver within ten days or show cause why it should not be held in contempt for its refusal to do
25 so. (Id. at 40.)

2. Proceedings before the Bankruptcy Court

a. Preliminary Injunction Enjoining the Enforcement Action

Two days after entry of the Omnibus Order, on September 16, 2007, Integretel filed a voluntary petition under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code, In re The Billing Resource d/b/a Integretel, No. 07-52890 (Bankr. N.D. Cal.) (RV VIII, BDE 1.) The next day, September 17, Integretel filed a Notice of Bankruptcy in the Enforcement Action asserting that all proceedings against it (including those before the Florida District Court) were automatically stayed.

On September 19, 2007, Integretel commenced the adversary proceeding that led to the pending appeals. The Billing Resource d/b/a Integretel v. David Chase and the Federal Trade Commission, No. 07-AP-5156. (RV I, APDE 1, BDE 27.) Integretel filed this proceeding so that it could obtain injunctions, pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 105(a), to prevent the Commission from prosecuting the Enforcement Action, and to prevent the Commission and the Receiver from pursuing the Contempt Proceeding.⁷

On September 21, 2007, the Florida District Court entered a Clarification Order (the “September 21 Clarification Order”) (RV III, APDE 35, pp. 45-48 (Bates 41-44)), holding that the Enforcement Action and Contempt Proceeding were not stayed by Integretel’s bankruptcy petition. The September 21 Clarification Order also reiterated the holdings of the pre-petition September 14 Omnibus Order that Integretel is not the owner of the Reserve Funds and that the Reserve Funds are the property of the receivership estate:

⁷On December 21, 2007, the bankruptcy court granted Integretel leave to amend its complaint in this adversary proceeding. It added a count requesting that the bankruptcy court enter a declaratory judgment holding that the Commission and the Receiver have no interest in the Reserve Funds held by Integretel. (The Reserve Funds are, of course, the very funds whose status has already been addressed by the Florida District Court.)

Integretel was holding more than $1.35 million in reserve funds that belonged to two of the Nationwide defendants, Access One and Network One, in spite of several provisions of the Temporary Restraining Order in (sic) [Amended] Preliminary Injunction requiring it to turn said funds over to the Receiver* * * * On Friday, September 14, 2007, this Court issued its Omnibus Order in which it ruled that the reserve funds are the property of the receivership estate and ordered Integretel to pay the current reserve funds, amounting to $1,762,762.56, to the Receiver.

(Id. at 45) (emphasis added). The Order concluded “that the reserve funds are neither the property of the ‘bankruptcy estate’ nor Integretel.” (Id. at 48) (emphasis added).⁸

On November 2, 2007, the bankruptcy court issued a Memorandum Decision (RV III, APDE 41), and announced that it was enjoining the Commission from prosecuting the Enforcement Action against Integretel. (The court issued its written order on November 7.) However, the court declined to issue any injunctive relief regarding the Contempt Proceeding, finding that it would be duplicative of a stay issued by the Eleventh Circuit that was then in effect. (RV III, APDE 41 at 58:6-18.)⁹

On March 7, 2008, the bankruptcy court orally extended the terms of the November 7 preliminary injunction. As a result, the Commission is now enjoined, until June 12, 2008, from prosecuting its Enforcement Action against Integretel. In its oral decision, the bankruptcy court expressly adopted all of the terms of its earlier November 2 Memorandum Decision. (RV X, ADPE 155, 24:4-8.) At this hearing, the bankruptcy court also set a hearing for June 5, 2008, to determine whether to grant a further extension of the injunction. (Id. at 45:14-24.)

⁸On September 24, 2007, Integretel appealed the September 14 Omnibus Order and September 21 Clarification Order. That appeal, No. 07-14531-EE (11th Cir.), has been fully briefed, but oral argument has not been scheduled.

⁹On November 7, 2007, the bankruptcy court memorialized its November 2 oral preliminary injunction, and the Commission’s appeal was docketed with this Court on November 14. (RV VIII, APDE 69; DCDI 1.)

1 The bankruptcy court entered a written order memorializing that extension on March 18,
2 2008 (“the March 18 extension order”). (RV X, ADPE 154.) The Commission appealed the March 3 18 extension order to this Court, where it was docketed at No. 08-1637-JF.

5 b. Preliminary Injunction Enjoining the Contempt Proceeding

6 On November 5, 2007, the Eleventh Circuit vacated its stay regarding the Contempt
7 Proceeding. (RV III, APDE 52 at Bates 003-005.) Within four hours, the bankruptcy court
8 conducted a telephonic hearing and issued a temporary restraining order enjoining the Commission
9 and the Receiver from pursuing the Contempt Proceeding. (RV I, APDE Nov. 5, 2007 (unnumbered 10 docket entry).) On November 16, the bankruptcy court sua sponte extended the temporary 11 restraining order through December 6, 2007.
12

13 At a November 26, 2007, hearing, the bankruptcy court initially declined to issue a 14 preliminary injunction with respect to the Contempt Proceeding, stating that, as a matter of comity, 15 it would be inappropriate for it to preclude the Florida District Court from enforcing its own order.
16 (RV X, APDE 99, and DCDI 29 at 45:11-24, APDE Nov. 26, 2007 (unnumbered).) However,
17 subsequently during that same hearing, the court reversed itself and orally issued the preliminary 18 injunction that it had earlier stated it would not enter. Id. at 62:7-25. The next day, November 27, 19 2007, the bankruptcy court convened yet another hearing, reissued its oral preliminary injunction,
20 and read a “revised” decision into the record to support the issuance of the injunction. (RV X APDE 21 85, and DCDI 24 at 5:7- 26:1, APDE Nov. 27, 2007 (unnumbered).) On November 27, the 22 Commission noted its appeal of the injunction, and this appeal was docketed by this Court two days 23 later.

ARGUMENT SUMMARY

This Court should overturn the bankruptcy court's November 2 injunction. That injunction derails the Enforcement Action, which seeks to put a halt to Integretel's role in a scheme to bill consumers for phone calls they never made, and to obtain restitution for those injured consumers. Section 362(b)(4) of the Bankruptcy Code expresses Congress's intent that bankruptcy not serve as a shield for those, such as Integretel, who are charged with violations of federal laws. Nonetheless, the bankruptcy court trumped § 362(b)(4) with its injunction, which it issued pursuant to its general authority to issue orders. To the extent that a bankruptcy court may use its general authority to thwart the specific protection for law enforcement, it may do so only in exceptional circumstances. The bankruptcy court identified no such circumstances, and as a result, improperly allowed Integretel to foil the Commission's law enforcement efforts. (Part I.A, infra.)

The district court also abused its discretion when it held that Integretel had satisfied the four-part preliminary injunction test. The first part of that test requires Integretel to show a strong likelihood of success on the merits. Because Integretel was seeking to enjoin the Enforcement Action, the bankruptcy court should have required Integretel to show that, if the Enforcement Action were to go forward, Integretel would have prevailed. But instead, the court held that Integretel satisfied this part of the test merely because Integretel was likely to succeed in reorganizing under the Bankruptcy Code. Although this might have been the appropriate test if Integretel were seeking to enjoin litigation in which it was not a party, it makes no sense here, where Integretel is the defendant in the litigation it seeks to halt. (Part I.B.1, infra.)

The bankruptcy court also erred with respect to the second part of the test, irreparable injury, because it saw Integretel's situation, and its "injury," as somehow unique. But Integretel is no different from any other defendant in any federal law enforcement action that seeks to use

1 bankruptcy to undermine law enforcement. Again, to the extent that the Enforcement Action
2 impedes Integretel's attempt to reorganize, that is exactly the sort of "injury" that Congress
3 contemplated when it provided that actions such as the Enforcement Action would not be stayed by 4 a bankruptcy filing. (Part I.B.2, infra.)

6 The bankruptcy court was so focused on assisting Integretel's reorganization that it gave 7 little weight to the public interest furthered by the Enforcement Action. Indeed, it believed that,
8 pending reorganization, the scrutiny of Integretel's creditors would somehow render the 9 Enforcement Action superfluous. As a result, the bankruptcy court has improperly supplanted the 10 role of the Commission, the federal agency charged with enforcing the FTC Act's consumer
11 protections. Although the bankruptcy court claims that it is only halting the Enforcement Action
12 during "crucial junctures" of Integretel's reorganization, the court's March 2008 three-month
13 extension of the injunction it originally entered in November 2007 makes clear that, in its view, all
14 "junctures" of Integretel's reorganization are critical. (Part I.B.3, infra.)

17 The bankruptcy court also abused its discretion when it enjoined the Commission and the 18 Receiver from pursuing the Contempt Proceeding against Integretel, a proceeding that was made
19 necessary by Integretel's refusal to comply with two Florida District Court orders that required it
20 to turn over the $1.7 million Reserve Fund to the Receiver. The bankruptcy court believed it was 21 free to revisit ownership of that money, but, in fact, it was estopped from doing so by the doctrine
22 of collateral estoppel. In particular, several days prior to Integretel's bankruptcy petition, the Florida
23 District Court issued its Omnibus Order in which it held that the Reserve Funds were the property
24 not of Integretel, but of Enforcement Action defendants Access One and Network One. The 25 Omnibus Order was final, and Integretel was a party before the Florida District Court. Thus, all the 26 elements of collateral estoppel have been satisfied. Accordingly, the Reserve Funds are not 27
28

Integretel's property, are not part of its bankruptcy estate, and the bankruptcy court is precluded from determining otherwise. (Part II.A, infra.)

Just as it did with respect to the injunction of the Enforcement Action, the bankruptcy court abused its discretion when it applied the preliminary injunction test and enjoined the Contempt Proceeding. The court concluded that Integretel was likely to prevail in the Contempt Proceeding because it mistakenly believed that Integretel's bankruptcy filing divested the Florida District Court of its in rem jurisdiction over the Reserve Funds. But § 362(b)(4) preserves the right of a court in an action such as the Enforcement Action to enforce the orders it has issued. Thus, Integretel's bankruptcy filing did not assure its success in the Contempt Proceeding by terminating the proceeding. The bankruptcy court was also concerned that, if the Contempt Proceeding went forward, Integretel and its creditors would be irreparably harmed because they would lose access to the Reserve Funds. But this is not the sort of harm that is cognizable by the bankruptcy court because, even before Integretel filed its bankruptcy petition, the Florida District Court had already determined that the Reserve Funds were never Integretel's property. Thus, it was the bankruptcy court, not the Florida district court, that lacked jurisdiction over the Reserve Funds. Finally, the bankruptcy court's balance of the equities and assessment of the public interest was flawed because it overvalued the importance of Integretel's reorganization, and undervalued the benefit to the public of the Enforcement Action. (Part II.B, infra.)

ARGUMENT

I. THE BANKRUPTCY COURT ABUSED ITS DISCRETION WHEN IT ENJOINED THE COMMISSION'S LAW ENFORCEMENT ACTION

The bankruptcy court abused its discretion when it enjoined the Commission from continuing the prosecution of its Enforcement Action against Integretel. First, the court ignored that, because

1 the Commission's Enforcement Action against Integretel is specifically exempt from the Bankruptcy
2 Code's automatic stay, § 362(b)(4), it may be enjoined pursuant to § 105(a) only in exceptional
3 circumstances. Also, the court erred with respect to the factors that it must consider prior to the 4 entry of a preliminary injunction.

6 A. Injunctions Against Law Enforcement Actions are Highly Disfavored

7 Congress specifically recognized the vital nature of the Commission's consumer protection 8 work through its enactment of § 362(b)(4), which exempts law enforcement actions from the 9 otherwise automatic stay. The legislative history of this provision indicates a clear Congressional 10 intent that consumer protection law enforcement actions should not be hampered by a defendant's
11 filing for bankruptcy. H.R. Rep. No. 95-595, at 343 (1977), reprinted in 1978 U.S.C.C.A.N. 5963, 12 6299; In re McMullen, 386 F.3d 320, 324-25 (1st Cir. 2004) (exemption intended to discourage 13 debtors from filing for bankruptcy "either primarily or solely" to evade a law enforcement action
14 which would "seriously threaten the public safety and welfare," such as a consumer protection
15 action); In re Dolen, 265 B.R. 471, 481 (M.D. Fla. 2001); FAMCO I, 264 B.R. at 645-51. This 16 undoubtedly is why courts have found that a § 105(a) injunction against proceedings relating to a
17 law enforcement action is appropriate only in very limited circumstances, none of which is present
18 here. E.g., Javens v. City of Hazel Park, 107 F.3d 359, 366 (6th Cir. 1997) (§ 105(a) can be used 19 to enjoin "enforcement of local regulation which is shown to be used in bad faith"); FAMCO I, 264
20 B.R. at 655 (law enforcement action may be enjoined under § 105(a) only if the action "severely 21 threaten[s] the integrity of the bankruptcy process"); In re One Times Square Assocs. Ltd. P'ship, 22 159 B.R. 695, 702 (S.D.N.Y. 1994), aff'd without opin., 41 F.3d 1502 (2d Cir. 1994) ("§ 105(a)
23 should be used sparingly and then only to supplement the Bankruptcy Code, not supplant the 24 Code"); In re Oxford Mgmt., Inc., 4 F.3d 1329, 1334 (5th Cir. 1993) ("The powers granted by"
25
26
27
28

1 §105(a) “must be exercised in a manner that is consistent with the Bankruptcy Code”). As the court
2 explained in Corporacion de Servicios Medicos Hospitalarios de Fajardo v. Mora, 805 F.2d 440,
3 449 n.14 (1st Cir. 1986), proceedings that are exempt from the automatic stay pursuant to §362(b)(4)
4 may be enjoined only in “exceptional circumstances.” See Mirant Corp. v. Potomac Electric Power
5 Co., 378 F.3d 511, 523 (5th Cir. 2004).¹⁰

7 Indeed, since 1973, when the Commission first obtained authority to bring enforcement
8 actions in federal courts, no district court has ever upheld an injunction of a Commission law
9 enforcement action. Other than in this case, the only court to enter a § 105 injunction against the 10 Commission was the bankruptcy court in FAMCO I, and that injunction was overturned on appeal
11 by the district court. The bankruptcy court in FAMCO I thought that a Commission law 12 enforcement action was outside the scope of the § 362(b)(4) law enforcement exemption or, in the 13 alternative, that the Commission’s action could be stayed under § 105(a). 264 B.R. at 642-43. On 14 appeal, the district court concluded that the bankruptcy court erred and abused its discretion in 15 reaching both of these conclusions. It held that the Commission’s civil law enforcement action was 16 exempted from the automatic stay pursuant to § 362(b)(4). Id. at 645-51. Then, addressing the issue
17 that is identical to the one raised here -- whether the Commission could be enjoined under § 105(a)
18 from prosecuting an enforcement action to permit a bankruptcy proceeding to go forward without 19 distraction -- FAMCO I held that such an injunction was improper and that “by creating the 20 regulatory and police powers exception to the automatic stay, Congress expressly indicated that in
22
23
24
25

26 ¹⁰The bankruptcy court incorrectly relied on Excel to justify its injunction. (RV III, 27 APDE 41 at 17-18.) But Excel is not relevant because it involved a purely private claim 28 affecting a debtor, not a law enforcement action that is exempt, pursuant to § 362(b)(4), from the automatic stay on litigation generally resulting from the filing of a bankruptcy petition.

1 most cases the concerns addressed by such actions are more important than the goals of efficiency
2 and maximizing the estate.” Id. at 654. There is no reason for this Court to deviate from this rule.

4 When the bankruptcy court enjoined the Commission’s prosecution of Integretel, it did so
5 because it believed that the Enforcement Action would “threaten the integrity of the bankruptcy
6 process” during its “critical first few months.” (RV III, APDE 41 at 29.) When it extended the 7 terms of the November 7 preliminary injunction for an additional 90 days, the bankruptcy court
8 explained that Integretel was still at “a critical juncture of [its] bankruptcy case.” In the court’s 9 view, because Integretel was in the middle of the bankruptcy process, it needed the freedom “to 10 pursue a successful reorganization in the very near future.” (RV X, ADPE 155, at 44:7-9; see also 11 38:6, 12-14). According to the bankruptcy court, “immediate continuation of the enforcement action
12 seriously threatens [Integretel’s] ability to reorganize.” (Id. at 38:14-16.)

13
14 The bankruptcy court thus concluded that a law enforcement action, which would otherwise 15 go forward pursuant to the stay exemption created by § 362(b)(4), must be enjoined in favor of “the 16 integrity of the bankruptcy process” at any point that the bankruptcy court considers as a “crucial 17 juncture.” But it is clear from the bankruptcy court’s November 2 Memorandum Decision and from 18 the rationale stated in the March 7, 2008, hearing that, in the court’s opinion, all phases of a
19 reorganization are crucial. This analysis, which would justify an injunction of any law enforcement
20 action, makes no attempt to identify any sort of exceptional circumstances to justify an injunction
21 of the Enforcement Action. Further, the bankruptcy court’s injunction is completely contrary to the 22 express mandate of Congress, which is, as the legislative history of § 362(b)(4) indicates, that law
23 enforcement actions generally, and consumer protection law enforcement actions specifically,
24 should not be deferred or delayed merely because a defendant chooses to file for bankruptcy. The
26
27
28

1 broad brush approach taken by the bankruptcy court renders the § 362(b)(4) exemption meaningless,
2 in direct contravention of Congress's intent.

3 The bankruptcy court's analysis also ignores the elementary principle of statutory 4 construction set out in In re American Hardwoods, 885 F.2d 621 (9th Cir. 1989), that, where specific 5 and general statutory provisions conflict, the specific provision controls. That case involved an 6 attempt to enjoin actions against co-debtors under the general equitable authority of § 105(a). The 7 Ninth Circuit held that, even though § 105 "endow[s] the court with general equitable powers, [it]
8 does not authorize relief inconsistent with more specific law." Id. at 625. That is the situation that 9 exists here -- the preliminary injunction entered by the bankruptcy court pursuant to the general
10 authority of § 105(a) conflicts with the express provision of § 362(b)(4), a provision that directs that 11 law enforcement actions should go forward notwithstanding a debtor's bankruptcy filing.

14 B. The Bankruptcy Court Misapplied the Preliminary Injunction Standard

15 Not only did the bankruptcy court fail to identify any exceptional circumstances justifying 16 its preliminary injunction, it also incorrectly applied the traditional preliminary injunction standard
17 to this case. As the bankruptcy court noted (RV III, APDE 41 at 15), Excel states that a movant 18 must demonstrate:
19

20 (1) a strong likelihood of success on the merits, (2) the possibility of irreparable injury to 21 plaintiff if preliminary relief is not granted, (3) a balance of hardships favoring the plaintiff,
22 and (4) advancement of the public interest (in certain cases). Alternatively, a court may 23 grant the injunction if the plaintiff demonstrates either a combination of probable success 24 on the merits and the possibility of irreparable injury or that serious questions are raised and the balance of hardships tips sharply in his favor.

25 503 F.3d at 1093. The bankruptcy court erred with respect to the first part of the test because it
26 focused on the likelihood that Integretel would reorganize, not its likelihood of prevailing in the 27 action it was seeking to enjoin, i.e., the Enforcement Action. Second, the court incorrectly evaluated
28

1 the injury that Integretel would face if the injunction were not granted because it mistakenly
2 believed that Integretel's situation was somehow unique. Finally, the court ignored the Ninth
3 Circuit's admonition that, in the context of injunctions relating to Commission law enforcement
4 actions, "when a district court balances the hardships of the public interest against a private interest,
5 the public interest should receive greater weight." FTC v. Affordable Media, LLC, 179 F.3d 1228, 6 1236 (9th Cir. 1999), citing FTC v. World Wide Factors, Ltd., 882 F.2d 344, 347 (9th Cir. 1989).

9 1. The bankruptcy court misevaluated Integretel's likelihood of success on the merits

10 The bankruptcy court misapplied the likelihood of success portion of the preliminary 11 injunction test because it misunderstood the Ninth Circuit's holding in Excel. Based on that error, 12 the court merely required Integretel to show that it was likely to succeed in reorganizing. In fact,
13 the court should have required Integretel to show that it would succeed in the Enforcement Action.

15 In Excel, the debtor, Excel, sought to enjoin an arbitration that involved its former CEO and 16 another company. Excel sought this injunction because it believed the arbitration could have an 17 impact on the administration of the bankruptcy estate. (Because Excel was not a party to the 18 arbitration, the automatic stay of § 362(a) did not apply.) The court held that, because Excel was 19 seeking to enjoin an action "against a non-debtor," i.e., an action in which Excel was not a party,
20 Excel could satisfy the first part of the preliminary injunction test if it merely showed that it was 21 likely to succeed in its reorganization. 502 F.3d at 1095. The court noted that, normally, the party
22 seeking a preliminary injunction to enjoin a legal proceeding must show that it is likely to succeed
23 at a later stage in the proceeding it is seeking to enjoin. Id. But because Excel was not a party to 24 the arbitration it was seeking to enjoin, it would not be involved in any later stage of that arbitration.
25 Thus, from Excel's perspective, the only relevant proceeding in which it was actually involved was 26
27
28

1 the reorganization, and, to satisfy the first part of the preliminary injunction test, the court required
2 Excel to show that it was likely to succeed in its reorganization. Id.

3 Here, the situation is totally different. Integretel is seeking to enjoin a legal proceeding, the 4 Enforcement Action, in which it is involved as a defendant. Assuming that the Commission's 5 Enforcement Action goes forward, Integretel will be involved in later stages of that proceeding.
6 Moreover, unlike Excel, § 362 does apply to the Enforcement Action. In particular, § 362(b)(4)
7 specifically provides that a law enforcement action, such as the one brought by the Commission
8 against Integretel, is exempt from the automatic stay. That is, Congress has determined that law
9 enforcement actions should go forward, that the filing of a bankruptcy petition should not interfere 10 with such actions, and that bankruptcy is not to be used as a haven for wrongdoers.

11 Because Integretel is a party to the Enforcement Action, and because that action may have 12 an impact on Integretel's ability to reorganize, the test applied by the bankruptcy court to determine 13 likelihood of success is not the correct one. Instead, the court should have considered the likelihood 14 that Integretel would prevail in the Enforcement Action. That is a showing that Integretel has not 15 made, and cannot make. Accordingly, it cannot satisfy the first part of the preliminary injunction 16 test.

18
19 20
21 2. The court misassessed the injury that Integretel would face if the injunction 22 were not entered.

23 The bankruptcy court erred with respect to the second part of the preliminary injunction test
24 -- irreparable injury -- because it mistakenly believed that the harm that Integretel would incur if an 25 injunction were not granted was somehow unique. On November 2, 2007, the court characterized 26 Integretel's potential injury as arising from "an unusual convergence -- almost a perfect storm -- of 27 the trial schedule in the Enforcement Action and the critical first few months of a viable chapter 11
28

1 bankruptcy case that warrant a limited preliminary injunction at this time.” (RV III, APDE 41 at 2 29.) Four months later, at the March 7, 2008, hearing, it was clear that the court believed that the 3 “perfect storm” had not abated, so it extended the preliminary injunction for three more months.
4 This time, the court described Integretel’s situation as “very special,” and “absolutely critical.” (RV
5 X, APDE 155 at 38.) The bankruptcy court also asserted that its decision would not “set a precedent
6 that a defendant can escape prosecution for committing deceptive and unfair trade practices by 7 simply filing for bankruptcy.” (RV III, APDE 41 at 29.) In fact, Integretel was not facing any 8 exceptional situation or “unusual convergence.” Nor did Integretel inadvertently wander into a 9 “perfect storm.” Rather, because it declared bankruptcy voluntarily, Integretel had full control over 10 the timing of its petition -- its bankruptcy was timed so that it could elude contempt (as well as a 11 summary judgment motion). And the only “critical” or “special” circumstance that the court could 12 identify was that Integretel was attempting to sell its assets. (RV X, APDE 155 at 38.) But, of 13 course, this is a step that would be taken by many debtors undergoing reorganization. There is 14 nothing unique about Integretel’s situation. Indeed, its bankruptcy filing, and the adversary
15 proceeding it initiated against the Commission, amount to little more than an all-too-common 16 attempt by a defendant in a law enforcement action to use its bankruptcy as leverage to “escape [or 17 at least delay] prosecution for committing deceptive and unfair trade practices [as well as the 18 Contempt Proceeding] by simply filing for bankruptcy.” (RV III, APDE 41 at 29.) As a result, the 19 November 7 preliminary injunction, rather than having little precedential value as the bankruptcy
20 court suggested, Id., serves as a virtual road map for future defendants in Commission law
21 enforcement actions who wish to thwart the Commission’s Congressionally mandated prosecutorial
22 efforts. All such defendants need do is file a well-timed voluntary bankruptcy petition, and then 23 claim that, absent a § 105(a) injunction, they would be forced to defend against a law enforcement
25
26
27
28

1 action during “the critical first few months of a viable chapter 11 bankruptcy case.” The bankruptcy
2 court compounded this error when it extended the injunction so that it applied as well to the 3 apparently equally “critical” middle and end of Integretel’s bankruptcy case. (RV X, APDE 154.)

5 The court also claimed that legal expenses associated with the Enforcement Action would 6 be “highly injurious” to Integretel’s reorganization. (RV X, APDE 155 at 41.) But Congress has 7 specifically considered the burdens imposed on a debtor that must defend itself in another forum,
8 and it determined that such burdens should not prevent such actions from going forward. As the 9 court explained in EEOC v. Rath Packing Co., 787 F.2d 318, 325 (8th Cir. 1986), “Congress by 10 excepting certain actions from the automatic stay provision recognized that the debtor would likely 11 incur litigation expenses as a result of the excepted lawsuit. Congress, therefore, implicitly 12 recognized that litigation expenses alone do not justify a stay of a proceeding” under § 105(a) of the 13 Bankruptcy Code.¹¹ Indeed, “[i]f litigation costs constituted a sufficient threat to the estate’s assets 14 to justify an injunction, the regulatory and police powers exception to the automatic stay would be,
15 for all practical purposes, a nullity.” FAMCO I, 264 B.R. at 654. See also In re Emerald Casino,
16 Inc., 334 B.R. 378, 390 (N.D. Ill. 2005) (since Congress gave an express priority to law enforcement 17 actions through the enactment of § 362(b)(4), a law enforcement proceeding should not be stayed 18 under § 105(a) even if going forward would deplete the debtor’s assets). Thus, litigation costs
19 generally cannot constitute an irreparable harm that justifies the entry of a preliminary injunction 20
21
22
23
24
25

26 ¹¹The bankruptcy court believed that EEOC v. Rath was distinguishable because, in that 27 case, the debtor was liquidating, not reorganizing. (RV X, APDE 155 at 35.) But that 28 distinction is irrelevant because the exemption of § 362(b)(4) applies to all debtors, regardless of whether they are liquidating or reorganizing.

1 against a law enforcement action, and the bankruptcy court abused its discretion when it based its
 2 injunction on the routine impact of the Commission's Enforcement Action.¹²

3 3. The Bankruptcy Court Erred in Assessing the Harms to the Commission and 4 the Public Interest

5 The bankruptcy court also erred in evaluating the final two parts of the preliminary 6 injunction test -- balancing hardships, and assessing the public interest.¹³ FAMCO I is the only
 7 decision to examine the appropriateness of a § 105(a) injunction against a Commission law
 8 enforcement action. In assessing the harm to the Commission and the public interest, FAMCO I
 9 noted that "the goals of public policy, punishment, and deterrence" (as embodied by Congress in the 10 § 362(b)(4) law enforcement exemption to the automatic stay) may conflict "with the goals of

 14 ¹²The bankruptcy court also suggested that the burden of requiring Integretel's staff to 15 participate in the Enforcement Action would constitute irreparable harm. (RVIII, APDE 41 at 16 27-29.) In particular, the court focused on Integretel's president, Mr. Dawson. Id. At the time
 17 the preliminary injunctions were entered, Integretel had 37 employees, 22 of whom had over 18 five years of experience with Integretel, and 13 of whom had over ten years experience. (RV I,
 19 APDE 6 - Att. 4, ¶ 9.) In EEOC v. Consolidated Freightways Corp. of Delaware, 312 B.R. 657
 20 (W.D. Mo. 2004), the debtor had a significantly smaller staff (only 24 people). Nonetheless, the 21 district court vacated a bankruptcy court injunction and required the debtor to continue its 22 defense of a racial discrimination law enforcement action while in bankruptcy. As the court
 23 observed in Consolidated Freightways, though the burden of bankruptcy "is a mighty chore, 24 fortunately it is not one that Consolidated Freightways employees are bearing alone," since it
 25 had the considerable assistance of competent counsel. 312 B.R. at 661; see also FAMCO I, 264
 26 B.R. at 657 (debtor's staff resources not overburdened sufficiently to justify enjoining a Commission law enforcement action where debtor had outside entities assisting it with the bankruptcy process). In this case, Integretel is amply represented. In particular, in the Enforcement Action, it is represented by Tighe Patton Armstrong Teasdale PLLC of Washington, D.C.; and by Holland & Knight LLP of Atlanta, GA. In the bankruptcy proceeding, it is represented by Sheppard Mullin Richter & Hampton LLP of San Francisco, CA. Integretel is also assisted by FTI Consulting, Inc., of San Francisco. With this amount of representation, Integretel can easily handle both its reorganization and the Enforcement Action.

27 ¹³Because the Commission acts in the public interest, 15 U.S.C. § 45(b), harm to the 28 Commission is also harm to the public interest, and the final parts of the preliminary injunction test merge.

1 maximizing an individual's estate assets and efficiently processing claims." 264 B.R. at 634. The 2 harm caused by an injunction issued under the authority of § 105(a) against a law enforcement
3 action, while difficult to quantify, represents a very real impairment of the ability of a governmental 4 unit to comply with its Congressional mandate to enforce the law. Id. FAMCO I further held that 5 the overarching public interest in law enforcement proceedings must take precedence over the 6 private interests particular to any specific bankruptcy proceeding. As a result, Commission
7 enforcement actions should not be enjoined.

10 Considering deterrence in particular, the harm to the governmental units must be measured 11 with a broader perspective in mind than these parties [to this bankruptcy proceeding] alone.
12 The bankruptcy court and [the debtor] are undoubtedly correct that there will be more money
13 to distribute to [creditors] in this case if the separate actions are not allowed to proceed.
14 However, the governmental units are entitled to make the choice that, over time, similarly 15 situated borrowers and consumers benefit more when companies do not violate the law in 16 part because they know that bankruptcy will not provide a way out when their wrongs are 17 discovered. In any given case, reasonable minds could disagree about the marginal costs and 18 the marginal benefits of different approaches and which will maximize the wealth and 19 happiness of the greatest number of people. The point is that it is the governmental units
20 charged with enforcing consumer protection laws, governmental units that are responsive 21 to the political will of the people, that should be the ones to make the choice, not the 22 bankruptcy court.

23 Id. at 659 (emphasis added).

24 By enjoining the Enforcement Action, the bankruptcy court harmed the Commission, and 25 the public interest, by preventing the Commission from prosecuting its Enforcement Action against 26 Integretel. Indeed, the bankruptcy court provided Integretel with a free pass allowing it to escape 27 from prosecution. In November 2007, the bankruptcy court stated that such an injunction would be 28 necessary only for "a few months," but it has now extended that injunction for a few months more, and the court has given no indication that, after those few more months, it would not grant yet another extension. Integretel has used the bankruptcy court to escape prosecution. This Court

1 should not assist it in doing so. See CFTC v. Co-Petro Mktg. Group, 700 F.2d 1279, 1283 (9th Cir.
2 1983) (bankruptcy is not to be “a haven for wrongdoers”).¹⁴

4 The bankruptcy court further erred by holding that the public interest would not be harmed
5 because, “[i]t is highly unlikely that [Integretel] is currently violating any laws”. (RV X, ADPE 155
6 at 37:17-19.) Incredibly, however, the bankruptcy court did not base this factual conclusion on any 7 evidence. Instead, it relied solely on its intuitive belief that, because Integretel was involved in a
8 bankruptcy reorganization, it was no longer “likely” that Integretel was engaging in the sort of 9 conduct that gave rise to the Commission’s complaint. (Id. at 37:11-14.) Thus, not only did the 10 bankruptcy court base its extension of the preliminary injunction on incorrect conclusions of law 11 with respect to its authority under § 105, it also lacked any basis in the record for its finding that its 12 injunction would cause no harm to the public interest. Moreover, it ignored the considerable factual
13 record concerning Integretel’s law violations that has been developed in the Enforcement Action.
14 This is all the more reason why the bankruptcy court abused its discretion in continuing to enjoin
15 the prosecution of the Enforcement Action.
16

19 At most, injunctive relief under § 105(a) is a “rare remedy” that may be granted by 20 bankruptcy courts in law enforcement actions only in exceptional circumstances that “severely

23 ¹⁴The extent to which the bankruptcy court has thwarted the Commission’s law
24 enforcement efforts is well illustrated by contrasting Integretel’s experience with that of BSG,
25 the other billing aggregator that, like Integretel was named as a defendant in the Enforcement
26 Action. Undoubtedly motivated by a pending summary judgment motion, the February 25 trial
27 date, and assisted by Florida District Court-ordered mediation, BSG and the Commission entered 28 into a settlement agreement on January 25, 2008. In contrast, due to the November 7 preliminary injunction, Integretel has little motivation to settle the Commission’s claim and essentially has ignored the Enforcement Action since the entry of the injunction. Integretel refused to participate in any of the mediation sessions involving the Commission and BSG and has engaged in minimal settlement discussions with the Commission.

1 threaten the bankruptcy process.” FAMCO I, 264 B.R. at 654 (citations omitted). Here, there was 2 nothing exceptional about Integretel’s circumstances -- it faced the same situation and difficulties
 3 as any debtor that is seeking to reorganize while also defending a law enforcement action.
 4 Moreover, the bankruptcy court did not make adequate findings with respect to any of the parts of 5 the four-part preliminary injunction test. The court made no finding that Integretel was likely to 6 prevail in the Commission’s Enforcement Action. It made no adequate finding with respect to 7 irreparable harm. And it erred in its assessment of harm to the Commission and the public interest.
 8 Accordingly, it abused its discretion when it enjoined the Commission’s prosecution of its 9 Enforcement Action against Integretel.

12 II. THE BANKRUPTCY COURT ABUSED ITS DISCRETION WHEN IT ENJOINED
 13 THE COMMISSION FROM PURSUING A CONTEMPT ACTION AGAINST 14 INTEGRETEL

15 The Contempt Proceeding, which the bankruptcy court improperly enjoined, is ancillary to 16 the Commission’s underlying Enforcement Action -- its sole purpose is to enforce the turnover 17 provisions of the February 2006 TRO and September 2006 amended preliminary injunctions. Thus, 18 just like the injunction of the Enforcement Action, an injunction of the Contempt Proceeding would 19 be appropriate only in “exceptional circumstances.” See Corporacion de Servicios Medicos
 20 Hospitalarios de Fajardo, 805 F.2d at 449 n.14. But when the bankruptcy court enjoined the 21 Contempt Proceeding, it identified no exceptional circumstances.¹⁵ Also, as it did when it enjoined
 22

 24 ¹⁵Because courts must be able to “uphold their dignity,” contempt proceedings must not 25 be forestalled by a contumacious party’s filing for bankruptcy. E.g. SEC v. Wolfson, 309 B.R.

1 the Enforcement Action, the bankruptcy court once again abused its discretion by misapplying the 2 four-part preliminary injunction test.

3 A. No exceptional circumstances justify the injunction of the Contempt Proceeding

 5 In FAMCO I, the court held that exceptional circumstances justifying an injunction of a law
 6 enforcement proceeding may exist if that proceeding threatens the assets of the bankruptcy estate.
 7 FAMCO I, 264 B.R. at 652. The bankruptcy court here mistakenly believed that the Reserve Funds
 8 were the property of Integretel's bankruptcy estate, and that, by enjoining the contempt action, it was 9 making sure that those funds would be included in the bankruptcy estate. But the bankruptcy court
 10 ignored that, on September 14, three days before Integretel filed its bankruptcy petition, the Florida
 11 District Court in the Enforcement Action held that the Reserve Funds are the property of 12 Enforcement Action defendants Network One and Access One, and thus, had to be included within 13 the receivership estate in the Enforcement Action. Thus, those funds could not be the property of 14 Integretel, and, a fortiori, could not be part of Integretel's bankruptcy estate when it subsequently 15 filed its bankruptcy petition.

16
 17 The bankruptcy court failed to acknowledge that it could not revisit the status of the Reserve
 18 Funds because it was collaterally estopped from doing so. Collateral estoppel precludes the 19 "relitigation of issues that have been actually and necessarily decided in earlier litigation." In re
 20 Reynoso, 477 F.3d 1117, 1122 (9th Cir. 2007), quoting Frank v. United Airlines, Inc., 216 F.3d 845,

 22 court cannot "ignore [the] existence and effect" of a prior order that finally adjudicated the identical
 23 legal issue). Collateral estoppel applies where three requirements are met: (1) the issue necessarily 1975) (decided under the former Bankruptcy Act of 1898).
 25
 26

1 decided at the previous proceeding is identical to the one which is sought to be relitigated; (2) the 2 first proceeding ended with a final judgment on the merits; and (3) the party against whom 3 preclusion is asserted was a party in the first proceeding. Reynoso, 477 F.3d at 1122. Here, all three 4 requirements are easily met.

6 The first part of the collateral estoppel test is met because the September 14 Omnibus Order
7 issued by the Florida District Court in the Enforcement Action, and the November 27 Preliminary
8 Injunction issued by the bankruptcy court, address the identical issue -- Who owns the Reserve
9 Funds? In its Omnibus Order, entered prior to Integretel's bankruptcy petition, the Florida District
10 Court expressly decided that the Reserve Funds are the property of Network One and Access One,
11 not the property of Integretel, and that, as a result, those funds must be turned over to the 12 receivership estate.¹⁶ The September 21 Clarification Order reiterated this holding. In the adversary
13 proceeding, the bankruptcy court addressed precisely the same issue of who owns the Reserve Funds
14 in order to determine if they were part of Integretel's bankruptcy estate. (RV III, APDE 41 at 47.)
15

17 The bankruptcy court apparently believed it could evade the preclusive impact of the 18 September 14 Omnibus Order by recharacterizing it -- it claimed that the Omnibus Order merely 19 held that the Receiver had an "abstract" property interest in the Reserve Funds. That is, in the 20 bankruptcy court's view, the Omnibus Order could not have a preclusive effect because it did not 21 require Integretel to pay a specific amount to the Receiver. (RVX, APDE 100 and DCDI 23 15:11-
22 18, 17:15-16.) Even if, as a matter of law, an "abstract" order were not entitled to collateral estoppel
23

25 ¹⁶The bankruptcy court mistakenly believed that the September 14 Omnibus Order was "a 26 money judgment determining [Integretel's] purported liability to the receiver." (RV III, APDE 27 41 at 46). It was not. It merely required Integretel to turn over the Reserve Funds to the 28 Receiver. The Florida District Court has not yet entered a money judgment that would resolve the ultimate disposition of those funds.

1 effect, the bankruptcy court erred as a matter of fact because, in the Omnibus Order, the Florida
 2 District Court precisely determined the amount of Reserve Funds that Integretel improperly failed
 3 to turn over to the Receiver pursuant to its prior orders:

5 As of August 26, 2006, Integretel was holding $1,186,430.36 in reserves for Access One and 6 $173,918.66 in reserves for Network One. These amounts have increased, and as of June 30, 2007, the reserve amount being held by Integretel . . . is $1,762,762.56.

7 (RV III, APDE 35, at Bates 0030.) Thus, the September 14 Omnibus Order plainly provided that 8 $1,762,762.56 of the funds in Integretel's accounts were the property of Access One and Network
 9 One (and not the property of Integretel).¹⁷
 10

11 The Omnibus Order is also “final” for purposes of the second part of the collateral estoppel 12 test. “To be ‘final’ for collateral estoppel purposes, a decision need not possess ‘finality’ in the 13 sense of 28 U.S.C. § 1291.” Luben Indus. v. United States, 707 F.2d 1037, 1040 (9th Cir. 1983).
 14 See also Syverson v. IBM, 472 F.3d 1072, 1077 (9th Cir. 2007); Security People v. Medeco Security
 15 Locks, 59 F. Supp. 2d 1040, 1045 (N.D. Cal. 1999). In the collateral estoppel context “finality”
 16 means “little more than that the litigation of a particular issue has reached such a stage that a court
 17 sees no really good reason for permitting it to be litigated again.” Syverson, 472 F.3d at 1079
 18 (citation omitted). Here, Integretel filed extensive memoranda and participated in the oral argument 19 preceding the entry of the Omnibus Order resolving the ownership of the Reserve Funds. The 20 September 14 Omnibus Order and the September 21 Clarification Order make clear that the Florida 21 District Court “sees no really good reason for permitting [this issue] to be litigated again.” The
 23
 24
 25

26 ¹⁷Because the Reserve Funds were not Integretel's property, it matters not that Integretel
 27 believed that it (i.e., Integretel) would be destroyed if it could not have access to these funds by 28 December 14, 2007. (RV III, APDE 41 at 51.)

1 September 14 Omnibus Order, therefore, creates collateral estoppel as to the ownership of the 2 Reserve Funds issue.¹⁸

 4 Finally, the September 14 Omnibus Order passes the third part of the collateral estoppel test
 5 because Integretel was a party to that order just as it is a party before the bankruptcy court. As a
 6 result, the Omnibus Order collaterally estops the bankruptcy court from reconsidering the ownership
 7 and status of the Reserve Funds. Because the Omnibus Order determined that the Reserve Funds
 8 are not Integretel's property, the Contempt Proceeding does not threaten any asset of the bankruptcy
 9 estate and there is no exceptional circumstance justifying the bankruptcy court's injunction of that 10 proceeding. By ignoring the preclusive effect of the Omnibus Order, and the express statutory 11 prescription of § 1334(e)(2), the bankruptcy court erred by improperly extending its limited
 12 jurisdiction to property (the Reserve Funds) that is not the debtor's property. In re Simon, 153 F.3d
 13 991, 996 (9th Cir. 1998); see TM Patents, LP v. IBM, 121 F. Supp. 2d 349, 361 (S.D.N.Y. 2000)
 14 ("[t]he filing of a bankruptcy case does not, and cannot, give a debtor * * * greater rights in property
 15 than the debtor had prior to bankruptcy" and a bankruptcy court's jurisdiction "does not extend to 16 property that is not part of a debtor's estate").¹⁹
 17
 18
 19 20
 21

22 ¹⁸In its November 5, 2007, Order, the Eleventh Circuit, in directing the parties to file
 23 briefs concerning Integretel's appeals of both the September 14 Omnibus Order and the 24 September 21 Clarification Order, said nothing that contradicted Integretel's position that they 25 are final, appealable orders. (RV III, APDE 52 at Bates 003-005.) The pendency of the appeal
 26 of these Orders does not affect their collateral estoppel effect. Hawkins v. Risley, 984 F.2d 321, 324 (9th Cir. 1993); Robi v. Five Platters, Inc., 838 F.2d 318, 327 (9th Cir. 1988).

27 ¹⁹It is, of course, irrelevant that the bankruptcy court disagreed with the Omnibus Order.
 28 See RV III, APDE 40 at 20:17-20 ("And I now have this district court order which you know, in my personal opinion is incorrect in that these appear to be funds that belong to the [bankruptcy] estate. But now what do I do with that?") (emphasis added).

B. The Bankruptcy Court Abused Its Discretion in Evaluating the Four Parts of the Preliminary Injunction Test

As it did when it entered the November 7 Order, the bankruptcy court incorrectly applied the preliminary injunction test when it enjoined the Contempt Proceeding. First, as explained above, Integretel is not entitled to a preliminary injunction unless it can show that it is likely to succeed on the merits. Because it is seeking to enjoin the Contempt Proceeding, it must show that, if that proceeding were to go forward, it would be likely to prevail and would not be held in contempt. The bankruptcy court's holdings with respect to this part of the test were clearly erroneous. In particular, the court mistakenly believed that the contempt action could not go forward before the Florida District Court because, as a result of Integretel's bankruptcy filing, that court had been divested of its in rem jurisdiction over the Reserve Funds.²⁰ (RV III, APDE 41 at 39.) However, the court in SEC v. Elmas Trading Corp., 620 F. Supp. 231, 240-41 (D. Nev. 1985), which relied on the Ninth Circuit's decision in Co-Petro Mktg. supra, made clear that the filing of a bankruptcy petition by an entity involved in a securities law enforcement action did not preclude the district court in the law enforcement action from including the debtor's assets within the receivership estate. Because the SEC's regulatory action was exempted from the automatic stay, the Elmas Trading court rejected as "wholly without merit" the defendant's argument that, as result of its bankruptcy filing, the ²⁰The bankruptcy court also suggested that the Florida District Court lacked in rem jurisdiction over the Reserve Funds because they were mere "commingled funds" with no definite res. (RV III, APDE 41 at 8.) In fact, as the Florida District Court found, (RV III, APDE 35 at 3 (0031)), and the bankruptcy court conceded, (RV III, APDE 41 at 8), the amount of the Reserve Funds that are the property of the receivership is "tracked via an internal accounting entry" in Integretel's accounting system. The Florida District Court held that whether the Reserve Funds were maintained as an accounting entry on Integretel's books or in a separate bank account is "a distinction without a difference," (RV III, APDE 35, pp. 31-41 (0029-39)), because, either way, Integretel at all times maintained precise track of the amount of monies that constitute the Reserve Funds that are the property of the receivership estate.

1 predecessor of 28 U.S.C. § 1334(e)(1) divested the law enforcement court of jurisdiction over the 2 receivership estate. The argument rejected by the Elmas Trading court is precisely the same
3 argument that Integretel made and the bankruptcy court erroneously adopted. See also Co-Petro
4 Mktg., 700 F.2d at 1283 (law enforcement exception permits a district court to retain jurisdiction to 5 enforce pre-petition injunctive relief obtained in a law enforcement proceeding).

7 Moreover, § 362(b)(4) makes clear that the Florida District Court retained jurisdiction to 8 compel Integretel to turn over the Reserve Funds to the Receiver. In particular, the 1998
9 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code expanded § 362(b)(4) to permit actions by law enforcement
10 entities (that would otherwise be stayed under § 362(a)(3)), “to obtain possession” or “exercise
11 control over property of the [bankruptcy] estate” other than for the purpose of enforcing a money
12 judgment. In re Chapman, 264 B.R. 565, 570 (9th Cir. B.A.P. 2001), citing SEC v. Brennan, 230
13 F.3d 65, 74 (2d Cir. 2000). Thus, the 1998 amendments authorize law enforcement actions that seek 14 possession of property that would otherwise be part of the bankruptcy estate so long as the actions
15 do not seek to enforce a money judgment. Of course, the Commission has not yet obtained a 16 judgment against Integretel in the Enforcement Action. Thus, it cannot possibly be attempting to 17 enforce a money judgment. Since Congress made the policy choice to permit certain law 18 enforcement actions that may impinge on property in a bankruptcy estate, the courts are bound to 19 enforce the legislation according to its terms. In re Chapman, 264 B.R. at 570-71 (holding that the 20 expansion of § 362(b)(4) exempted an asset forfeiture action from the automatic stay even though,
21 if successful, the action would diminish the bankruptcy estate). Accordingly, the bankruptcy court
23
24
25
26
27
28

1 misassessed Integretel's likelihood of success because it incorrectly believed it had exclusive
 2 jurisdiction over the Reserve Funds. (RV III, APDE 41 at 39-43, 51.)²¹

 4 The bankruptcy court also abused its discretion because it mistakenly believed that Integretel
 5 was somehow deprived of an opportunity to participate in proceedings before the Florida District
 6 Court prior to that court's issuance of the September 21 Clarification Order. (RV IX, APDE 296
 7 at 15.) But the bankruptcy court misunderstood the significance of the Clarification Order. That 8 order merely reiterated what the Florida District Court had previously determined when it issued the 9 Omnibus Order one week earlier. That is, on September 14, the court determined that the Reserve
 10 Funds were the property of Access One and Network One. The September 21 Clarification Order
 11 repeated that fact, and explained the significance of what the court had determined on September 12 14. In particular, because the Reserve Funds were the property of Access One and Network One,
 13 those funds could not possibly be part of the bankruptcy estate. Integretel had ample opportunity
 14 to participate prior to the entry of the September 14 Omnibus Order. Thus, there is absolutely no
 15 merit to the bankruptcy court's concerns that Integretel was somehow deprived of due process.²²

18
 19 ²¹The single case the bankruptcy court cited in its Memorandum Decision for its claim of 20 "exclusive jurisdiction," Gilchrist v. General Elec. Capital Corp., 262 F.3d 295 (4th Cir. 2001), 21 is inapposite. Gilchrist involved assets that indisputably were the property of Gilchrist. Here, the Florida District Court held the Reserve Funds are not the property of Integretel.

22 ²²The bankruptcy court observed that, to grant a preliminary injunction, Integretel need 23 not necessarily demonstrate a strong likelihood of success on the merits, but could get by with a 24 showing of "serious questions going to the merits" if it can also show "strong irreparable injury."
 25 (RV IX, APDE 296 at 14.) In fact, this misstates the proper test. As the Ninth Circuit has 26 explained, in lieu of the traditional four-part test, a preliminary injunction may be granted if the 27 plaintiff "demonstrate[s] either a combination of probable success on the merits and the 28 possibility of irreparable injury or that serious questions are raised and the balance of hardships tips sharply in [its] favor." Rodde v. Bonta, 3576 F.3d 988, 994 (9th Cir. 2004) (emphasis in original; internal quotation marks omitted). In fact, as explained by the Ninth Circuit, this alternate formulation requires the court to assess not merely the hardship the plaintiff might

1 Second, the bankruptcy court committed clear error in finding that Integretel would have 2 been substantially harmed absent the November 27 preliminary injunction. Most important, as 3 discussed above, the Florida District Court's September 14 Order conclusively determined that the 4 Reserve Funds were not Integretel's property, and accordingly, as the court recognized one week
 5 later in the September 21 Clarification Order, not part of Integretel's bankruptcy estate. Thus,
 6 Integretel could not be harmed by not having access to funds that were not its property. And, to the 7 extent that the Florida District Court's control over the Reserve Funds harms Integretel, that "harm"
 8 is contemplated by the exemption set forth in § 362(b)(4).²³

11 Finally, the bankruptcy court again misevaluated the harm to the Commission and the public
 12 interest. The Reserve Funds were paid to Integretel by tens of thousands of consumers who were 13 deceived or unfairly duped through the inclusion on their telephone bills of charges for collect phone
 14 calls they never made. As the Commission has argued in the Enforcement Action, those funds
 15 should be used to provide redress to those consumers. Also, the public interest is furthered if the 16 Florida District Court is able to vindicate its authority and enforce, through the Contempt
 17 Proceeding, the turnover provisions in its March 2006 TRO and September 2006 amended
 18 preliminary injunction, provisions that Integretel has flagrantly ignored. The situation here is similar 19
 20
 21

22 ²²(...continued)
 23 suffer if the injunction is denied, but instead requires the plaintiff to show that the balance of 24 hardships tips sharply in its favor. In any event, however the test is formulated, Integretel did 25 not make the requisite showing, and the bankruptcy abused its discretion by enjoining the Contempt Proceeding.

26 ²³The bankruptcy court also erred as a matter of fact because it believed that, if the 27 Reserve Funds became part of the receivership estate in the Commission's Enforcement Action,
 28 "they can be dissipated and lost to the [bankruptcy] estate forever." (RV IX, APDE 296 at 14.)
 However, the September 14 Omnibus Order precludes such dissipation because it requires the Reserve Funds to be placed in a segregated receivership account. (RV III, APDE 35, p. 41.)

1 to SEC v. Bilzerian, 131 F. Supp. 2d 10 (D.D.C. 2001). In that case, the defendant Bilzerian (as has 2 Integretel here) had not even minimally complied with the Court's prior orders. The court found
3 that Congress could not have intended to "permit a party to blatantly violate direct orders of a court
4 and then seek shelter" through a bankruptcy stay. Thus, the court held that a "court must retain the 5 ability to compel compliance with its orders," and bankruptcy is not a "free [pass] to run rampant
6 in flagrant disregard to the powers of the court." Id. at 15 (citation omitted). The bankruptcy court
7 simply ignored this important public interest.

9 CONCLUSION

11 For the reasons set out above, the bankruptcy court's November 7 and November 27, 2007, 12 preliminary injunctions, as well as the March 18, 2008, extension order, should all be vacated.

13 Respectfully submitted,
